About the report

The report deals in detail with the whole of Austria's official development assistance (ODA). It is intended as a reference source, providing a complete review of the origin, composition, volume and use of Austrian ODA.

The statistics are based on the definitions and directives of the OECD Development Assistance Committee (DAC) for describing official development assistance, which are designed in particular to establish an internationally comparable basis for determining whether and to what extent goals are being met.

The report proceeds from a general breakdown of the two main components, multilateral ODA and bilateral ODA, to a second, more specific part dealing with special aspects in the period under review. Section III.1 devotes particular attention to the bilateral programme of Austrian Development Cooperation (ADC) implemented by the Austrian Development Agency (ADA).

Until 2006, Iraq and Afghanistan were listed as special programmes and have been assigned since to the respective regional/country groups. Since 2008, cooperation with the Caribbean Community, CARICOM, as specified in the Three-Year Programme, has been cited under the Central America priority region, which is therefore now designated as Central America/Caribbean. The changes have also been made for the previous years for better comparison, resulting in slight differences compared with last years' tables.

Bilateral ODA, total		855.27	100.00	508.42

ADC/ADA priority countries are marked in bold. Kosovo is not classified internationally as a recipient country for 2008 as it was not yet included in the DAC's ODA Recipients List for that year.

1 through higher share of imputed students' costs

2 through higher share of humanitarian aid

3 through higher share of teachers sent

4 due to the large share of grants for export credit finance

5 through higher share of contributions to UN peace missions

Note:

Four former ODA loans from FMEIA to Ethiopia, Kenya and Burundi – totalling EUR 29.25 million – were cancelled in 2008. The net flow of these cancellations, however, was zero as the capital provided was already reported as net ODA outflow at the time of payment. Since all loans were interest-free also no ODA from cancelled interest was to be reported.

Since the new government took office in 2007, the disbursements of FMESC have been made by FMSR and FMEAC, where culture and art promotion is now located.

Assistance for Kosovo could not be itemised separately from Serbia in full until the 2008 reporting year. This was not yet possible for some of the specified assistance in previous years, such as imputed students' costs, which is why only the assistance cited in the Kosovo column could be given a clear geographic assignment for 2006 and 2007. Aid for Kosovo cannot be itemised in an international framework in 2008 either, because it was not yet included in the DAC's ODA Recipients List at that time.

IV. Special section for specific years

IV.1 Austrian ODA for food aid and for sectors of special relevance to food security 2004–2008

Under the food aid component, which has a long tradition in statistical records on official development assistance, food security is not fully itemised. The food aid category in the following pertains only to direct food supplies or finance for purchase, including only funding that can be quantified separately from other measures. Two different categories have been defined here: emergency food aid under humanitarian aid for short-term assistance in the event of disasters; food aid programmes for longer-term measures to assure food security. In humanitarian aid in particular, integrated relief packages are provided, consisting of drinking water, food, medicine, clothing, emergency shelter, etc. that cannot be quantified on their own and do not appear under the food aid heading.

To convey a full picture of Austrian food security contributions, therefore, it is necessary to itemise funding for other relevant segments. Measures in agriculture and integrated rural development frequently aim at promoting self-sufficiency in food or developing a food security framework. In addition, relevant components of food security can also make up part of other sectors (integrated water management, for example). The time series shown only convey a rough impression, as due to the unquantifiable components, it is impossible to cite specific amounts.

In multilateral ODA, i.e., contributions to the core budgets of multilateral development aid institutions, two areas can be clearly demarcated in multilateral food aid: contributions to the FAO World Food Programme and the Austrian share in the European Commission's Food Aid and Food Security Budget Line. Additional food security components are contained in other multilateral contributions, but it is not possible to put an exact figure on these.

IV.2 Funding from the Development Bank of Austria in 2008

The Development Bank of Austria (OeEB) appears for the first time as a donor in Austrian ODA statistics in 2008. OeEB provides long-term finance for private-sector projects in developing and transition countries that are commercially viable and make a developmental contribution. This finance on commercial terms does not meet the DAC's ODA criteria and does not therefore make up part of ODA. It is, however, recorded in the DAC statistics as developmental measures complementing ODA under the heading "private flows at market terms". To ensure and enhance the developmental impact of projects, OeEB also offers project support measures, so-called advisory programmes, which are eligible to be counted as ODA under the current DAC Reporting Directives.

When allocating funds, OeEB also makes use of an instrument which has not been used in the context of ODA till now, equity investment. This denotes the acquisition of shares in institutions, primarily funds, which in turn finance development projects. In the DAC system, equity investment falls under non-grant funding and is recorded statistically, similar to loans, as a net flow, that is, acquisition minus any returns from sales of such shares.
